WHATSAAPP SCAMS TO KNOW IN 2024

In 2024, WhatsApp will have connected billions of users globally and become an essential component of our everyday communication. But as the well-known messaging software develops and adds new features, it's important to be aware of the risks that could be concealed behind its easy-to-use interface.

Here are some prevalent scams to watch out for:

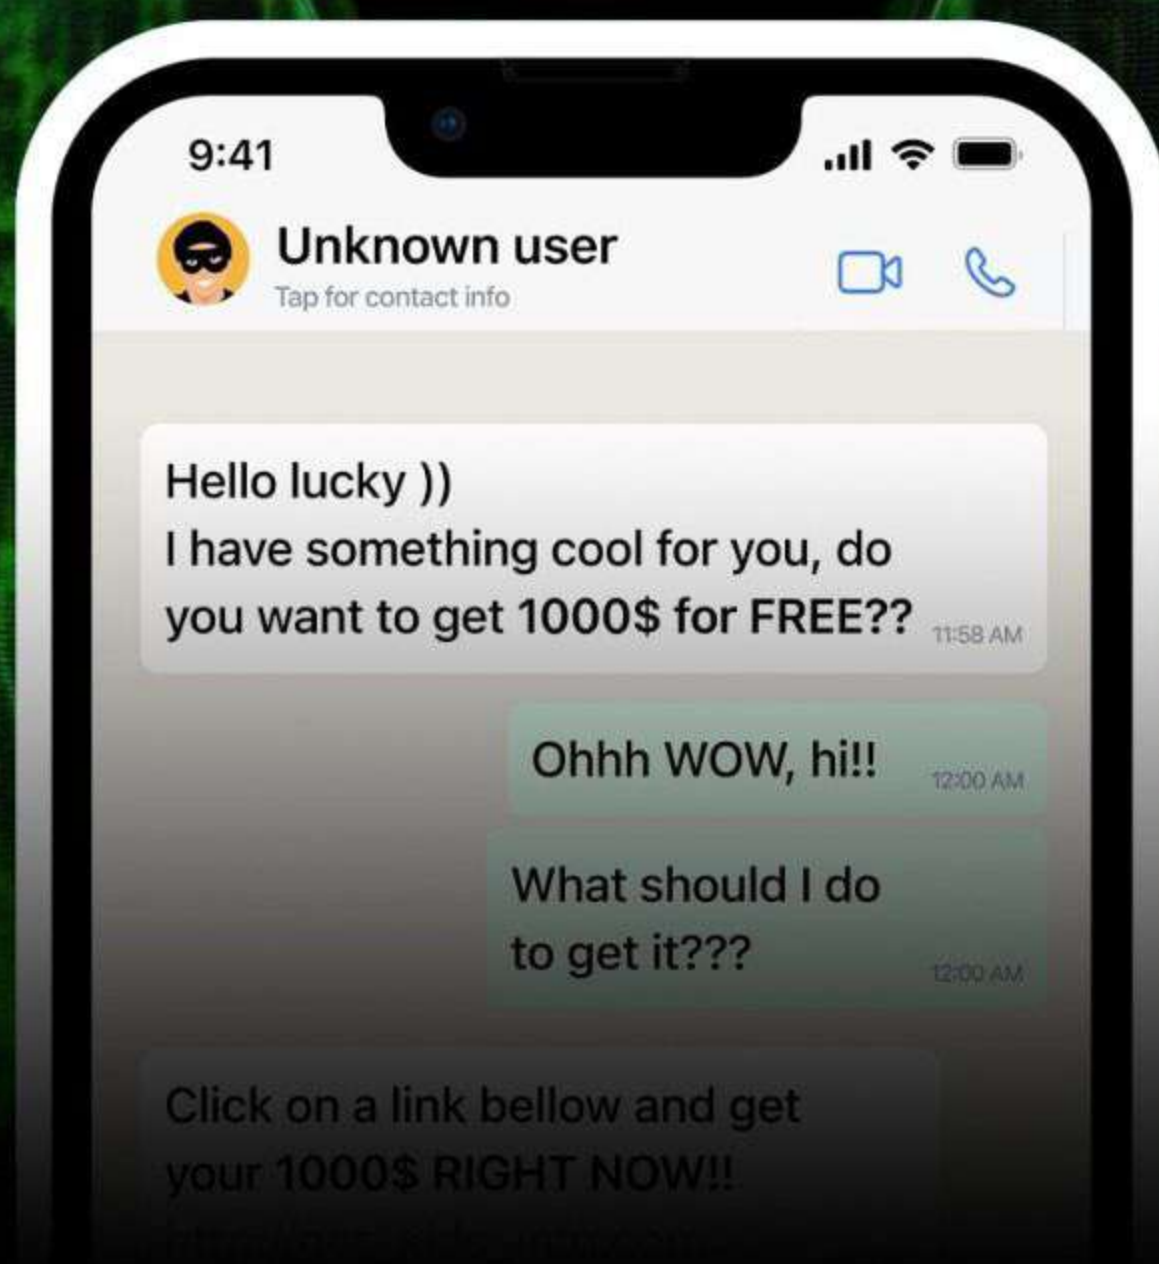

SECISYS

IMPERSONATION SCAMS

Scammers create fake WhatsApp accounts posing as someone the victim knows, such as a friend, family member, colleague, or even a company representative. They may use social engineering tactics to gain trust and then ask for money, personal information, or click on malicious links.

PHISHING LINKS

Scammers may send messages with enticing offers, fake delivery notifications, or urgent requests that include links. Clicking on these links can lead to phishing websites designed to steal login credentials, financial information, or infect your device with malware.

FAKE PROMOTIONS

Messages claiming to offer free gifts, vouchers, or discounts from well-known brands are a common lure. These messages might ask you to share your personal information, click on suspicious links, or complete surveys that harvest your data for malicious purposes.
